March to Appomattox: The Final Days of the Civil War

Day 1 – Richmond, VA

Richmond's place in history was secured once it became the Capital of the Confederacy in May 1861. A little less than four years later, on April 3, 1865, its business district lay in ruins as General Robert E.

Confederacy

Lee pulled his army from defending the city, and Jefferson Davis and the Confederate government evacuated. What could not have been known on that day in April was that the fate of the Confederacy, and the nation, would be decided less than a week later.
